ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

happenings That Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare.

During the first year of the Roosevelt Administration, the spectre of inflation presented a constant topic for conversation and comment. Then it dropped out of the headlines, and little was heard of it save in the serious economic reviews. Now inflation has returned to the public eye, and promises to be a major political and economic issue.

There are two kinds of inflation. The most obvious is currency inflation, and it is never resorted to except when a government is in the direst financial straits. It consists of turning the printing press loose to produce paper money, irrespective of gold backing or any other security. The result of this kind of inflation is to drastically lower the value of money—the prime modern example is post-war Germany. The German government, bankrupt because of war costs, turned out currency in unlimited quantities and the mark, which had been worth about 50 cents in foreign exchange, depreciated to the point where millions of marks were required to purchase a loaf of bread. The sufferings of the German people—particularly those with investments, savings accounts and insurance policies—were almost indescribable.

More subtle is credit inflation. This consists of constantly expanding the amount of business credit available, and makes it possible for industry, government and individuals to spend more than they earn for a long period of time

Eleanor Beck and Eva Merrill. The project was cake making. Two cakes were made, one by Walter Hall the other by Eleanor Beck.
Games were enjoyed and refreshments served. The next meeting is to be held with Miss Eleanor Beck April 20th. Six members were present.

THE MAINE MEETING PLACE

by EARLE DOUCETTE

The barefoot boy around whose sun-tanned form so much sentimental interest is enshrined, was tossed back and forth in the House last week as he was held up as an object lesson by both the opponents and proponents of the Bill which was passed relative to the increasing of resident hunting and fishing licenses.

The opponents of the bill assembled their sunbursts of rhetoric around the theory that if the bill were passed many boys in the State would be unable to fish because of the fact that the cost of a license would be prohibitive. They pictured the furtive fishing of boys who would slink along the banks trying to avoid the vindictive eyes of wardens who, ostensibly, would devote all their time to rounding up these youthful malefactors.

The proponents, on the other hand, said that the bill would be of more benefit to these boys in the long run than to any other class.
It would, they said, assure good fishing for all time so that boys now and in the future could follow this most fascinating pastime.

Several attempts were made to define the question as to just what a boy is. The law specifically states that anyone under the age of sixteen does not require a license to hunt or fish. Proponents seem to think that after a youngster is sixteen he should be able, by some means or other, to scrape up a dollar and fifteen cents in a year's time without resorting to the parental pocketbook.

It would seem to one who will take second place to none in his love and admiration of youngsters, that if every youngster over sixteen were to purchase his own license with money earned by himself it would go a long way toward making him aware of his great good fortune in being granted the privilege by Providence of living in a place where so much fun can be had for the price of running a few errands.

A short time ago the Analyst said that the recent general decline in wholesale prices casts doubt on the theory that inflation is inevitable—observed that the present movement is inevitable—observed that the present movement is stocks is of the "bear" variety, and there had never been inflation during the present generation without a "bull" movement.
One of the inevitable results of any kind of inflation, of course, is to force commodity and stock prices upward.

Thus there are two schools of thought on the subject—but the first school, consisting of those who forecast inflation next year or the year after, is by far the large-est. It is a notable fact that many businessmen believe belong to this school, and are now taking steps to prepare for inflation as best they can.

Conservatives who think the "share-the-wealth movement" is merely a temporary example of economic and social insanity which will soon pass away, are apt to be badly mistaken.

Father of the movement is Huey Long, who has dramatized an issue which is almost as old as time itself. His theory is that the trouble with the country is that a small group of people have too much money, and that they are gradually starving out the rest of us.

In opposition to Senator Long, economists of all schools bring forward graphs, statistics, charts, which dispute his figures and prove him to be entirely wrong.
However not one American in a thousand ever sees the work of the economists and the "share-the-wealth" advocates are masters at reaching the multitude. In addition, they have this great advantage some 10,000,000 people are unemployed, and 20-odd million are on relief. Many of these people are desperate, worried, disgusted with matters as they now exist.
They are likely to turn to anyone who can promise them a better day.

This is not to say that "Share-the-Wealth" is going to take the country by storm, and effect a revolution in our social and economic order. But it seems certain that it is going to be a powerful political and financial force for some time to come. If the third party movement actually comes to fruition, there will really be fireworks in 1936 and "Share-the-Wealth" is nearly sure to be the third party slogan.

NEWS of the WEEK

© News-Week, Inc.

EUROPE STILL UNSETTLED

London—Dog-tired from a fort-night's race through Central Europe, largely by plane, Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, reported to a thoroughly disturbed Cabinet the results of his errand of peace. Hitler, as Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, had already reported refused, to quiet for an instant the sabre-rattling of the Reich. In Poland, Dictator Pilsudski listened attentively to pleas for an alliance against war, but expressed unwillingness to antagonize his Nazi neighbors. Czechoslovakia warmed to peace talk, the first "break" the 37-year-old British diplomat had received on his mission. France moved an estimated 60,000 troops up to its German frontiers, held under arms another 60,000 youths whose 2-year training actually expired this month. Austria considered augmenting her 30,000 army by introducing universal conscription. Down in Italy, Mussolini shook a warning finger at the failure of Britain, France and his own country to agree on a fixed policy toward Hitler's defiance. In spite of Lloyd George's assurance that war was not immediately imminent, the tension throughout Europe continued.

UNREST IN IRELAND

Dublin—Haranguing the Senate of the Irish Free State into passing his Citizenship Bill, President Eamon de Valera, fulfilled his boast that "no citizen of the Irish Free State will be a British subject." The British lion yawned longer than usual, and J. H. Thomas, Dominions Secretary, reminded the Emerald Isle that "British citizenship can be bestowed but never rejected."

WHAT IS "BOON-DOGLING"?

New York—This city tore its Welfare Department up by the roots when an Aldermanic investigation disclosed the fact that many millions of relief funds had gone into apparently trivial occupational studies, among them "boondogging." This, the Welfare folks explained, merely meant the making of all sorts of gadgets by white-collar workers who couldn't swing a pick. Critics declared it was only a time-killing device used in institutions for the feeble minded. As a legislative investigation loomed, Mayor LaGuardia gave his answer over the radio Sunday night appointed as "Czar" of all welfare activities Oswald W. Knauth, authority on economics, one-time Princeton professor, latterly economic advisor to the huge R. H.
Macy & Company dry goods interests.

DEPARTMENT STORE HOUSE

New York—When President Roosevelt's stately mother yanked a red ribbon at Wannamaker's Store the other day, she destroyed $43 worth of cellophane wrapped around a complete 4-room house, thus launching the "Motohome." New Yorkers trailed through the little home at the rate of 800 an hour. Everything in the Motohome comes ready-made. It has one motor which operates plumbing, heating and all electrical devices; warms the air in winter, cools it in summer; filters out the dust and adds humidity. Fifteen models are available ranging from $3,800 to $9,900 set up anywhere within 100 miles of New York, including food and toilet articles enough to last three days. The purchaser supplies the land and furniture.

THE NAVAL CONCENTRATION

San Francisco—At three Pacific Coast ports, 50,000 tons from the U. S. fleet are taking turns at shore leave, bringing joy to thousands of merchants. All this is preparatory to the war games starting May 5th, when the most powerful armada ever assembled under a single command begins operations.

Reeves, in high command of the fleet, will maneuver 200-odd ships in an area of 5,000,000 square miles. Japan professes to see in the war games a sinister warning.
To placate popular Japanese feeling, the day the war games start, Admiral Upham, commanding the Asiatic Squadron, will steam into Yokohama on his new 10,000-ton flagship Augusta, and for three weeks will play the part of friendly ambassador of good will.

NEW CHANGE PRESIDENT

New York—Meeting the insistent demands of the younger elements of the New York Stock Exchange that some drastic change of policy be made to restore public confidence in the country's largest securities market, it is announced that Richard Whitney would retire from the race for the presidency of the Exchange, and that the Nominating Committee would name Charles R. Gay for that post, a recommendation that is tantamount to election. Mr. Gay is senior partner of Whitehouse & Company, the oldest house on the Exchange, and has long led the more aggressive liberal sentiment of the organization.

ASSAULT UTILITIES BILL

Washington—Threatened with extinction by 1940 if the Wheeler-Rayburn Bill becomes law, utility interests of the country are encamped here to fight for their lives before the House Interstate Commerce Committee. Radioed Burton K. Wheeler, Senator from Montana: "There has been more lying propaganda about this bill, and on a larger scale, than any other bill I've ever seen." F. S. Burroughs, Associated Gas & Electric Vice-President, attributed a $500,000,000 shrinkage in the market value of his company's securities to "loss of earnings resulting from acts of governmental agencies during the past six years." First Vice-President W. Alton Jones of the Cities Service Co., predicted the destruction of $1,147,000,000 worth of controlled property of his corporation if the bill passed. Henry I. Harriman, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, said: "I do not favor the dissolution of holding companies by 1940, or for that matter at any other date."

FARLEY TO LEAVE CABINET?

Washington—Political wisecracks declare that Postmaster General Farley will resign from the cabinet "as soon as Congress adjourns." Apparently, Mr. Farley doesn't deny it. Rumors of the Postmaster General's resignation, either as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee or as a member of the Cabinet, have been rife for many months. More searsoned politicians are watching and waiting.

A $435,000 DOLL HOUSE

New York—Colleen Moore, former movie-star, once had a doll house made from a cigar box, but it started her hobby for doll houses. This week she placed on exhibition at a local store the most costly doll house in the world—worth $435,000. Miss Moore is starting it on a 5-year trip among the cities of this country and Europe and hopes by charging a small admission to raise $1,000,000 to help crippled children. The house stands 14-feet high, has 11 rooms, its own lighting and water system and a gold pipe organ that plays by remote control. Its tiny electric globes are the size of a grain of wheat; hot and cold water fills its golden bathtub; even a microscopic nightingale trills from a lavender glass tree in the garden. The library cases are stilted with real books, postage stamp size, many of them in the actual handwriting of their authors. Famous artists have painted special murals for this truly enchanted castle.

ANOTHER FORD JOKE

Some joker spread a rumor that Henry Ford would trade a new Ford V-8 for a cent dated 1922.
Since the Denver Mint alone issued 7,160,000 of these coins in '22, it obviously is worth just one cent and no more. After receiving 2000 letters proffering 1922 pennies, Ford officials set about heading off the hoax.

waiian Islands. Admiral Joseph M.

My friends, as I stand near the "microphone," I shall speak clearly, so kindly turn the "control" way on to give plenty of volume that all in your house may hear my voice. (—Fine!) Now, do you get it clear and loud? Thank you. I'll have interesting broadcasts for you each time. You folks, who attend some Church have your own pastor. I'm not interfering with some other man's work. I am the pastor on "the air" of those who listen, and do not attend Church.

If, now as you "listen in," your eyes become moist, do not be ashamed. The shame comes the other way, when the "nail-points" are mentioned that certified the sufferings of Jesus upon that "Old Rugged Cross" that people are unmoved by it. Many folks try to forget about his dying for their sins. They give it little thought! And shall I add that modern preaching is little tinged with it? A minister's wife (not living in Bethel now) said she would not have a Scripture text calendar hanging in her house for her children to look upon the picture of the "crucifixion." That's one of the faults in this age; but, some have no scruples whatever, as to the kind of a picture their children may see at the "movies." I fear our children know little or nothing about the price Jesus paid for our great salvation. In later years, the mothers may weep over the "waywardness" of their sons and daughters. There is a "shrinking" and shameless modesty about enlightening the tender minds of our very own upon these vital things. Perchance your children attend some Sunday School a part of the year to swell the attendance,—are you going to leave it wholly to the teacher to bring out in her talks all that is necessary about Christ's sacrifice. Perhaps, it is not mentioned even there. I have known (looking back over the years) Churches and Sunday schools where this topic was never mentioned. Plans for socials and picnics and so forth seemed quite the program under discussion in those places.

You intelligent listeners, out there on the "air," know that the "Story of the Cross" explains the very foundation of our Christian religion.

Some parents and social leaders are causing more "nail-prints" to appear upon the hands and feet of Jesus than were made upon Golgotha. Anything that brings sorrow to the heart of our Saviour has caused one of those "nail-prints."

I realize my time is rapidly passing, so I'll conclude these remarks by relating an actual circumstance: A father said to his little son, "Buddy, every time I know of your being naughty or saying wrong things, I shall drive a nail into this board. And each time I know that you are sorry for a bad word, or deed, I will pull out a nail." So it went on for several days, when the father called his little boy to him and said, "The nails are all pulled out. I am so happy my little boy is doing better." The little fellow was silent for a moment, then he burst into tears, saying, "I am happy, too; but the nail-prints are there, daddy." We cannot fill up those scars made by sin; but real repentance will bring pardon. And joy will fill our souls.

Friends, my time is up, the bell has struck for me to sign off. The application of this simple story is easy to understand. I'll leave it now for your consideration.

This is the Evangelical Broadcasting Service of Oxford County (over Station DSB) from the friendly little town of Bethel, Maine. Ladies and gentlemen, you have been listening to a three-minute talk on the subject of "Nail-prints," by D. S. Brooks. "Will B. True" is your announcer.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Theodore Gatlin decided to adopt a baby in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But all his love for their foster daughter could not shelter her childhood from the hatred of his wife, who had never wanted her. Their affairs ended in the divorce court but ten-year-old Penelope was given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin, except for two Sunday afternoons a month. On their first day together they set out joyfully to a baseball game. A ball, hit into the bleachers, struck Penelope on the nose and the neurotic Mrs. Gatlin removed her from the hospital to which her former husband had hurried her. Mrs. Gatlin spirited the child to Europe. Gatlin retired from business, willed Penelope all his money, and was about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ended his life.

CHAPTER II.—Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, a rising young psychiatrist, was presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl whose terrible childhood had left her with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara did not think she was a responsible criminal and obtained Burt's expert testimony in court. Even Lanning, the doctor's faithful office nurse, was won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III.—Nance's criminal record outweighed Doctor Burt's clear explanation of her case and she was sent to San Quentin penitentiary for two years. Lanny visited her and Nance persuaded her to smuggle out a letter, which a confederate stole from her handbag outside the prison walls.

CHAPTER IV.—Nance escaped, although shot, by swimming out to a speed-boat manned by friends and went to Lanny's apartment. Lanny told Chief McNamara, who ordered her to bring Nance to his apartment and phoned for Doctor Burt.

CHAPTER V.—One of the men in the boat on which Nance escaped—two of them ex-convicts, the other a bootlegger—had been wounded and they went to Burt's office, where McNamara found them. The bootlegger he let go and he took the others to his home, ordering the injured one to care for Nance and his pal. From them he learned that Nance's real name was Penelope Gatlin. Detective Sergeants Flynn and Angellotti, seeking the reward offered for Nance's apprehension, went to Lanny's apartment in search of Nance. Looking over her San Quentin cell, McNamara found a blank check on a San Jose bank.

CHAPTER VI

"DO YOU happen to have an account in the name of Penelope Gatlin?" Chief McNamara asked the banker.

"Both a trust account and a checking account, Chief. We had her father's account for years before he was unfortunately killed in an automobile accident some eight years ago. We had the account of his divorced wife for quite a while, too, but she has closed that."

"Do you know where she lives at present?"

"I do not." He was interested. "But I remember her quite well—a very beautiful woman. Her first husband was a splendid chap—real shoe dealer in this city, and very prosperous. He and his wife had a row and she divorced him and got the child. Gatlin was permitted by the court to have the child on two Sunday afternoons a month, and one day he took her to a ball game and they sat in the bleachers. A long hard ball flew into the bleachers and flattened the little girl's nose; Gatlin rushed the unconscious child to a hospital and his ex-wife came and took her home before anything but emergency treatment could be given. Gatlin suspected she was going to try to ruin that ruined nose by prayer—he kidnapped the child, was caught, arrested, and did sixty days in the county jail."

"While he was in jail Mrs. Gatlin fled to Europe with the little girl, and Gatlin was desolated."

Subsequently Gatlin sold out his business, made most of his estate liquid and established a trust with us in favor of himself and daughter. He had made a settlement with Mrs. Gatlin.

"When his wife fled to Europe with the child, Gatlin ceased to deposit the monthly check to her credit, in the belief that she'd write to know why. She didn't, but in some other manner he located her, and started for Europe with the intention of stealing the little girl from her. On the way to the station, an automobile hit the taxi he was in and Gatlin was killed."

"Did he leave a will?"

"He did. His daughter was his sole beneficiary. We were the executors and probated it. There was the ten thousand dollar letter of credit he had purchased just before starting on his fatal trip, and half a dozen pieces of city realty, which has since increased enormously in value. We advertised for the heir but received no answer, so the estate was closed and we handle it now, as trustee."

"How do you know Mrs. Gatlin has become Mrs. Merton?"

"She has leased the house Gatlin gave her in the divorce settlement, and about two years ago, when the lease expired and the old tenants departed, she came down here to have the place renovated and secure a new tenant. It was only then that she heard of Gatlin's death. She came to this bank, with her husband, making inquiries about Gatlin's estate, and tried hard to get control of it, but she was out of luck. That's how we located the heir."

"What were the conditions of the trust?"

"The income was to be permitted to accumulate and be reinvested and the child was to have two hundred and fifty dollars a month until her eighteenth birthday, when the total income from the trust was to be turned over to her. She can never touch the principal, however, although Gatlin did provide that she might have up to ten thousand dollars of it at any one time if, in the judgment of the trustee, the emergency requiring such withdrawal was deemed good and sufficient. Gatlin had faith that the real estate, if held long enough, would appreciate tremendously—and it has. The trust is now worth three-quarters of a million and the income is close to twenty thousand a year."

"You say Penelope Gatlin has a checking account also? Has she ever asked for an emergency withdrawal of ten thousand dollars?"

"No."

"Is her checking account active?"

"Not very. She draws checks sporadically. Her checking account has interested us considerably for the past two years, because her monthly statement and dead checks have all been returned by the post office. With the exception of about a dozen checks made out to local merchants and probably in payment of her bills, Miss Gatlin's checks have all been in favor of one Ella Cates, of San Francisco. We traced the Cates woman down through the indorsements on the checks, but she stated she didn't know Miss Gatlin's address; that Miss Gatlin visited her occasionally, wrote out checks and asked her to cash them for her at the local grocery store or drug store. These people stated that Ella Cates never received the money at once, but that they collected the checks for her and then gave her the money. I don't like the looks of this, Chief."

"I'll soon find out all about it," McNamara promised. "And I know where Penelope Gatlin is—only I'm not going to tell you now. Would you mind letting me look over her old bank statements and the dead checks?"

The banker readily granted him the privilege, and McNamara went through the checks carefully, noting those drawn in favor of Ella Cates. The last one drawn was in favor of a man named Hugh P. Taylor, in sum of five thousand dollars, and deposited by him to the credit of his account in the Federal Trust company of San Francisco.

"I have all the information I want, with this exception." He drew forth one of the rogue's gallery photographs made at the central station by the police photographer. "Is that Penelope Gatlin?"

"That's the girl, Chief. Is she in trouble with the police?"

Dan McNamara laughed. "Not at all. She's the sweetest little thing on earth. The only trouble she's been in is that she's been lost. Amnesia. Can't remember who she is or anything about her past life. Has several aliases she used at will."

"How interesting—and how sad." "Neither interesting nor sad—to me. We handle lots of cases like this. They're curable. You'll be good enough to regard this interview as strictly confidential, of course. It would be very embarrassing for the girl if news of her unfortunate predicament should leak out, for, of course, after her mind has been restored to its normal functions, she will have no memory of the period in which she has been lost. I know a doctor that will fix her up in jig time."

"And after he's done that," the banker suggested, "have a plastic surgeon fix her nose. She used to be as lovely as a violet."

"Sorry about the nose," McNamara lied, "but I've had the best plastic surgeons in town examine it and there's no hope." He held out his hand. "Thanks for your courtesy. You've been a great help. Meanwhile, don't send out any more of those bank statements and dead checks. Mum's the word."

Back in San Francisco McNamara went directly to the city prison and looked over the blotter to see what strange fish his men had brought in during his absence.

He found a woman, an old offender, booked for drunkenness, and ordered her sent to his office. When she arrived he locked the door, and fingerprinted her on the appropriate card, after which he lectured her on the error of her ways. Then he went upstairs to the identification bureau and asked the filing clerk to have pointed out to him the filing cabinets containing criminal records for the year 1914-15 and 1916.

He was searching for a face that was photographed on his remarkable memory, and at last he found it. It was that of a young woman, black-haired and with a "saddle" nose, but not quite so badly deformed as Nance Belden's nor did the contour of the face resemble Nance Belden's. However, since the original of that photograph had, to the chief's knowledge, been dead six months, he decided it would do. He slipped this record into his breast pocket and went back to his office. Here he carefully removed the three photographs from the card to which they were pasted in a row across the top. Below the row of photographs appeared the typewritten criminal history of the subject and in appropriate spaces on the reverse of the card appeared the subject's fingerprints.

McNamara picked up the fresh card, upon the reverse of which he had fingerprinted the woman who at times drank too much. He placed this card in the typewriter of his secretary, who had gone for the day, and carefully filed it in with Nance Belden's criminal record. Then he pasted over the top of this record the three photographs of the dead woman he had taken from the old files, carefully burned all the evidence of the substitution, went upstairs and handed the record to the clerk, who replaced it in the files.

Promptly at six-thirty a knock sounded on his door, and to his hearty "come," Messrs. P. Flynn and A. Angellotti entered.

"I sent for you two boys to tell you in no uncertain terms to lay off Miss Rebecca Lanning," the chief began. "However, I owe it to you to tell you why. Miss Lanning is a friend of mine of long standing, and I know she is a worthy and dependable woman and absolutely truthful. She isn't interested in this girl, Nance Belden. It happened this way. I regarded that girl as a nut, see—and haven't any confidence in the bone that does our medico-legal work. So I took Nance up to see Dr. Stephen Burt. Miss Lanning is his nurse. She was very kind to the girl—very understanding—and the Belden brat got stuck on her. She has an affection complex, understand."

Flynn and Angellotti nodded languidly.

"Apparently," the chief continued, "Nance hasn't any friends. The poor, lonely kid remembered Miss Lanning, so she wrote and asked her to visit her in the pen—and now the warden swears she smuggled out of San Quentin, a letter with Nance's plan of escape. Well, maybe she did, but if she did, Miss Lanning didn't know it."

"Now, when the Belden girl came to Miss Lanning's home she realized she couldn't harbor her. Within a minute after the girl entered, Miss Lanning had me on the phone. 'I've just heard a thump out in the hall,' says she. 'I think the girl's fainted. Better let me put her to bed, Chief, and have Doctor Burt come over to bandage her wound; then the ambulance can call for her in the morning.'

"I thought that was a good idea. When she came back Nance was just going out of the door. The trouble was that Miss Lanning thought the girl was unconscious, but Nance heard her and beat it. Now it's up to you two to find her."

"How long have you known Miss Lanning?"

"Quite a while," McNamara lied. "Leave her alone from now on and don't waste your time watching her house. The Belden devil won't come back there again. That will be all, boys."

To be continued next week.

LOCKE MILLS SUNDAY SCHOOL

Sunday School 11:30 a. m. at Town Hall.

Congratulations, Bethel, on your splendid showing of the past two Sundays. Just a word about our past record. From Oct. 7 to the beginning of the contest, our average attendance was 72 each Sunday.

I would like to know how that compares with Bethel's average, for the same period. We are making no special drive for outside help in the contest, but all visitors, not belonging to another Sunday School, may be sure of a very cordial welcome. Our people are showing a fine community spirit. Last Sunday, five ladies, one of them 63 years young, walked 2½ miles over roads impassable for autos, in order to attend our School. Another lady, 52 years young, who had been confined to the house since last fall by ill health, walked over 1½ miles, over roads a horse would have difficulty in travelling, in order to be with us. Go to it, Bethel, you may beat us in numbers, but I'll bet my last year's straw that you can't beat that spirit.—J. Carlton Lapham.
